

COMPREHENSIVE BIBLIOGRAPHY of the

CPITM

ASSESSMENT

1948-2002

Acknowledgments and Introduction

This bibliography represents more than 50 years of scholarly work contributed by researchers from around the world and compiled during this time by Harrison G. Gough, author of the California Psychological Inventory™ (CPI™) assessment. Wallace B. Hall, Pamela Bradley, and Robert Most merit recognition for their important efforts in identifying many of the references herein cited. Acknowledgement for the substantial work involved in the physical preparation of this listing is extended to Brooke Linehan and Rich Thompson of CPP, Inc. Finally, credit for leadership, management, and editing of the bibliography belongs to Judy Chartrand, David Donnay, and Kate Molitor.

The bibliography was developed for use by psychologists, counselors, and human resources professionals who seek a comprehensive listing of research supporting the construction and use of the CPI™ assessment. Interested readers will find reports on a wide variety of topics, including academic achievement in high school, college, and graduate programs, economic status, creativity, criminality, gender socialization, military performance, moral development, social and political attitudes, prejudice, personal adjustment, self-esteem, lifespan personality development, adolescent and adult health, heritability, marital and family relationships, migration, lifestyles, stress management, substance abuse and addiction, therapeutic responsiveness, career choice and development, cross-cultural personality assessment, employee retention, job performance, leadership and managerial potential, managerial teams, intelligence and personality, dropout in high school and college, faking and response invalidity, high-aptitude students, and social insight, among others.
